Granger denied emphatically that he had traded on the fact that he was McClave's son-in-law, or that he had black-mailed applicants, or borrowed money from policemen, or got checks cashed on the strength of his relationship to McMcClave.

Granger said he made $15 a week at grieb's and the same at Smith & Gray's.

Mr. Nicoll stopped here, and Mr. Goff took up the witness again.

Granger said he first began to be asked All. Nicols stopped here, and all offices took up the witness again.

Granger said he first began to be asked for assistance in getting appointments to the force while he was engaged to Clara McClave.

"People heard I was engaged to her, and they thought I might have some influence. I was engaged a year and a half before I was married."

The first persons who had approached him on this subject were attendants at a roller-skating rink on Broadway, which he was accustomed to visit with Miss McClave.

Granger said he gave letters of introduction to the Commissioner to these people, and to a man who worked at

"Did you talk to him about the divorce case after the papers were served?"

"Yes."

"Where is he now?"

"They sent him to South Dakota, but I have heard he is in Europe now."

"They sent him away just about the time this Committee was to convene?"

Mr. Nicoll objected to this and said it was a base insituation, as everybody knaw young McClave was in very delicate health.

"It is very strange that this delicacy of health has come on in so many cases just about the time this Committee began its sitting." said Mr. Goff.

"Who was the Captain?"

"I don't know his name. I never saw him before, but he was a thin man with a gray beard."

"Is he the same captain who is at Union Market now?"

"Yes, the same one. He looks like that gentleman," pointing to Mr. Moss.

"Well, go on. What did the captain station and told him, it was a shame to arrest me after paying out all my money, and I asked him if I could not open for a little while to make some money to pay what I owed."

"It is very strange that this delicacy of health has come on in so many cases just about the time this Committee began its sitting," said Mr. Goff.

Coming to the letter which Granger wrote to his father-in-law touching the withdrawal of his defense in the divorce suit, the witness explained the passage in which he declared his innocence of the charge and his lack of means to carry on the fight.

"I wanted Mr. McClave to let the case go over till the Fall, when I would have money to defend the suit.

"Mr. McClave refused. 'No,' he said, I've got you where I want you and I'm going to keep you there."

Checks Are Dangerous.

In a conversation with Mr. McClave.

In a conversation with Mr. McClave, the witness said his father-in-law told him that checks were self-convicting, and after the Cooper case he never offered Mr. McClave a check. He always gave him bills.

"Mr. McClave said he paid out $20,000 in per year on alleged forged checks. Is that so?"

The next witness called was James Thatcher, superintendent of the bachelars' apartments at 4. West Twenty-seventh street. Formerly he kept a smoon at One Hundred and Seventy-seventh and Third avenue. Capt, Sevenson was in command of the precinct and Michael Grady was the Ward man.

Grady, the witness said, was frequently in the saloon, and that the place was usually opened on Sunday in violation of the law.

"Did you ever pay any money to Grady" asked Lawyer Moss, who was "No, I didn't pay any money myself, but I saw the accounts were frequently in the adoon with the had to pay money out for this and that. "He told me every once in a while that he had to pay money out for this and that. "He told me every once in a while that he had to pay money out for this and that. Thatcher went on to say he only had the saloon about a year. He was previously steward of the South Side Club, Long Island. He was nothen the saloon much, and never saw Edward Mills, the barkeeper, pay Grady.

"I thought it was necessary to pay the police for protection, and that it was an understood thing. I believe that Mills really paid Grady, and I gave him authority to do so.

She said she was now a prisoner in the Tombs, where she had been for two months. On Sept. 24, 1893, she said she opened a disorderly house at 378 West Houston street. There were four girls in the house.

"Was that all the money you had to pay?" asked Mr. Goff.

"Oh, no. I had to pay $50 a month besides."

"What did they tell you when you paid the $500?"

Brennan said to me: 'Now you can go right on and keep open freely, and not be afraid of any one,' so I opened that night."

Mrs. Cohen, who proved to be a very voluble witness, went on to say that she made arrangements with Brennan and R. Farrell, to pay the monthly assessment in two instalments, $25 on the first and the rest in the middle of the month. This arrangement she kept up faithfully, paying the money usually to Farrell sfter the first month.
